Harris, Morton and others, who have fought hard for reforms in the health department.

Chairman Hobson said he had no great faith in the proposed scheme, but he would vote for it for harmony's sake.

The amended ordinance now goes to the Board of Aldermen, where the original proposition has already been adopted, and then to the lower branch. It is anticipated that it will become law at an early date.

Resolutions Adopted.

The board of the Miller Manual Labor School has adopted highly complimentary resolutions respecting the character of the late Capt. E. J. Carter, superintendent of the institution.

PEDRO SAVED HER LIFE.

Mrs. Chapman's Dog Warned Her of the Earthquake.

Mrs. Thomas C. Chapman, of Buffalo, N. Y., was a visitor in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, but, unlike the majority of the others caught in the city, she fared very well. The only thing that is worrying her is the loss of her poodle. Mrs. Chapman got here last week from Oakland, and is now with Mr. Chapman at the Hotel Marie Antoinette, where they will stay for a few days before going to Buffalo. "When I left for San Francisco," she said, "I intended to stay there about three weeks, and I took only a valise with me, also my dog Pedro, which had been my constant companion for the last seven years. I owe my life to Pedro, for when I opened my door, he came running under my arm, and about an hour before the earthquake occurred—which, as you know, was about 5 o'clock in the morning—Pedro jumped into my bed and woke me up with his paws. He gave one bark when I opened my eyes, jumped onto the floor again, and began running around the room excitedly for a minute. Then he stopped in front of the door, pawed it several times with his fore-feet, barked again, and looked around at me in a pleading way. I tried to quiet him, but he would not. He kept on barking and jumping. Of the other members of the family, I was then just a little before 5 o'clock. I went out and sat down on the veranda, as I felt almost certain that something was about to happen. All the others followed me soon as they could get into their clothes. Pedro meanwhile was as restless as ever, and ran up and down the lawn, barking furiously. Presently we heard a low rumbling noise, and a few minutes later the flooring under us began to sway up and down slightly. We felt as though we were on the deck of an ocean liner. Suddenly the lights in the city itself, from which we lived some little distance, went out, and the booming noise became louder. Just then someone on the veranda said excitedly, 'It's an earthquake, run!' and we rushed to the house to gather up what we could of our belongings. Almost everything I possessed was already in my valise, and I grabbed it up and ran out of the house. The others quickly followed. My hostess had already requested her coachman to hitch up the two horses in the stable to a double-seated buggy, and it was waiting for us at the door. We all scrambled in with our valuables, and made a bee-line for the Oakland ferry, which was about two miles from the house. When we had got several hundred yards from the house the lights in it went out, as did all the others around us. It was not long after that that the whole town was in flames.

"It was a really marvellous escape we had. I shall never forget that ride to the ferry and the awful things we witnessed on the way. I don't know what became of my faithful dog. He wasn't to be seen anywhere about when we drove away. After the earthquake we returned to the house, but there was nothing but ruins."—New York Tribune.

Not for Her.

A story is told of a young wife who knew little of housekeeping. She was, in consequence of that inexperience, disposed to stand a bit in awe of the butcher, the baker, and the milkman. One day, when she was out for her usual errands, she was met by a man who, she thought, was a milkman. He was, however, a milkman, and she was, however, a milkman. He was, however, a milkman, and she was, however, a milkman.

The young wife hesitated for a moment, then, drawing herself up to a dignified attitude, she replied coldly: "No, I don't think I care for any to-day."—Harper's Weekly.

SPECTACULAR SCENES AT STATE CAPITOL BURNED.

Governor Led Fire-Fighters With Band of Legislators Dressed in Night-Clothes.

(By Associated Press.)

BATON ROUGE, La., June 8.—The saving of the State Capitol from destruction by fire last night was accomplished in a spectacular manner, with Governor Blanchard, assisted by many Louisiana legislators dressed in their night clothes and hundreds of Baton Rouge citizens, supplementing the fire department. The fire started from defective wiring near the roof of the Senate chamber, destroying the Capitol's eastern wing above the first floor. The loss is about $60,000. Among the valuables in the Senate, where the roof fell in, is the famous painting, "The Battle of New Orleans," valued at $40,000. Governor Blanchard directed the work of saving valuable papers. The Legislature now being in session, the Senate will meet today in the Elks' Theatre.

MAN-EATING RATS OVERRUN A COUNTY.

Attack Human Beings and Gnaw the Ears Off Live Stock Down in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 8.—Washington county is scourged by rats. They are killing chickens by the hundred and are attacking stock. In some instances their assaults have proved fatal. The towns are overrun by the rodents, but the greatest injury inflicted by them is in the country. It is not uncommon for a farmer to find his chickens killed by the rats. On the farm of William Dowell a recent rat attack was so bad that it could not be described. The following morning was found with its ears gnawed off by rats. In fact, a stock raiser in Washington county reports the loss of two yearlings by the rat pest.

Thursday night the Springfield Cornet Band received their new uniforms and left them over night on a table in a room where they met for practice. The following morning the uniforms were found strewn about the room.

Henry Bellow, a stock raiser, living two miles west of Vine Grove, has had several of his calves killed by the rats. The rats ate only portions of the carcasses, never molesting the bodies of the animals. The skins were killed.

Near the little town of Tolu, in the southwestern part of the county, the three-month-old infant of Mr. Mrs. Harvey Groves and a part of one of its arms eaten off by the rats.

When these armies of rats come from the mystery, and how to get rid of them is a problem, the solution of which is puzzling the people.

Bananas in Mexico.

The Mexican Government is seeking to develop the cultivation of bananas in that country. For some years past experiments have been made with a view to converting the fruit into a food for the people. These experiments are said to have been successful, and it is intended to start two establishments on the coast of Mexico for the purpose of converting the banana into food and of shipping the product to the United States. As the fruit is exceedingly nutritious it is anticipated that there will be no lack of demand for it.

WHYTE SUCCEEDS GORMAN IN SENATE.

Announcement of Appointment Made Last Night by Governor Warfield.

HAS HAD LONG PUBLIC CAREER

Enters Senate for Third Time and for Second Time by Appointment.

(By Associated Press.)

BALTIMORE, Md., June 8.—Rumors as to the appointment of a successor to the late Senator Arthur P. Gorman were plentiful to-day, but Governor Edwin Warfield left here for Annapolis without having declared his selection. To-night, however, he announced to the Baltimore office of the Associated Press by telephone from the executive mansion at the State capital that he has appointed William Pinckney Whyte to fill the senatorial vacancy caused by Senator Gorman's death.

Thus ex-Governor and Senator Whyte will enter the United States Senate for the third time and for the second time by appointment to fill an unexpired term, he having been named by Governor Swann to fill out the term of the late Reverdy Johnson, upon the appointment of the latter as United States Minister to England in 1893.

Has Filled Many Offices.

William Pinckney Whyte was born in 1861, was elected comptroller of the state of Maryland in 1884, and later entering Harvard School, and he was admitted to the bar of Baltimore in 1886. In 1887, he was elected to the House of Delegates of the Maryland Legislature, this being his first public office.

He refused renomination for the Legislature in 1890, was defeated for Congress in 1892, was elected comptroller of the treasury of the State of Maryland in 1893, was again defeated for Congress in 1894, was a member of the Democratic National Convention in 1896, and was in that year appointed by Governor Swann United States senator to fill out the term of the late Reverdy Johnson, appointed minister to England. In 1897 he was elected Governor of Maryland, and in 1898 United States senator. He declined re-election as senator in 1899, and in the following year was elected Mayor of Baltimore.

In 1893 he became Attorney-General of Maryland and in 1899 was appointed by President Harrison a delegate to the Congress of American Nations, which he declined. In 1898 he was made chairman of the commission prepared the new charter of the city of Baltimore, and in 1900 he became city solicitor, that being his most recent office.

It is stated that his first meeting with the late Senator Gorman, he is to succeed, occurred in 1871, when the late Senator called at his office to tender Mr. Whyte his support in the contest for the governorship of the State, then in progress.

OREGON ENCOURAGING.

Chairman of Campaign Committee Sees Signs of Turning Tide.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8.—Representative Bowers, of Mississippi, chairman of the campaign committee of the Democratic Congressional Committee, tonight gave out the following statement in relation to his office in Oregon Monday and its effect on the summer and fall elections of members of the lower House:

"The Oregon election is an indication of the revolt of the people against the stand-pat policy of the Republican party.

"In nineteen hundred and forty Oregon gave President Roosevelt four thousand majority, out of a total vote of ninety-five thousand. This year Oregon returns to office, two years later, with an increased majority, Governor George E. Chamberlain, Democratic incumbent for the past four years, reduces the majorities in both Congressional districts given the Republican candidates, and on a popular vote for United States Senator, Jonathan Bowne, Jr., over the Democratic nominee, John Geahen, incumbent.

"The issue of the revision of the tariff was presented by the Oregon Democrats, and it was dwelt upon in the utterances of all the newspapers which supported the Democratic nominees. The newspapers, which supported the Republican ticket, made strong appeals to the voters to yield to the party cry and insisted that Republican vote straight.

"They also loudly demanded the vindication of President Roosevelt by the election of every candidate on their list, inasmuch as the majorities received by Republican candidates who were elected were the smallest since the presidential election of 1896. Democrats may take warm comfort from the Oregon outcome and glad themselves for fighting a winning battle for the control of the next House of Representatives."

Recalled the Name at Last.

The stage coach that carries the mail between Kent's Hill and Redfield station in Maine, drew up along the roadside and the driver called out a little old man working in a field.

"Do you know who Mrs. Abby B. Brown is and where she lives?"

The old man considered. "Brown, Abby B. Brown?" he repeated. "You don't mean Mrs. Polly Brown, do you?"

"No, Mrs. Abby B. Brown; we've got a letter for her."

"Oh, you say the middle letter is B, do you?"

you? I know a whole lot of Browns that live on the other side of the road, but there ain't any Abby B. among them. You don't mean Abby B. Smith, do you? She lives over—"

"No, it's Abby B. Brown, we'll find her somehow. Thanks."

The stage driver started his horse, but before the corner was reached a faint "Hello" caused the passengers to turn around. The old man, hoe in hand, was pursuing the stage.

"Brown, Mrs. Abby B. Brown, do you say? Why, I know her. She's my wife."

Not Particular As to Their Tipples

"The Alaska Indians," said R. E. Bunch, of Seattle, "are slaves to their appetite for ardent spirits. I have never known one who wouldn't sell his clothes to get a drink of whiskey."

It is a fact of common knowledge up there that they will drink almost anything that has the faintest trace of alcohol. I have seen them drink red ink as though it were a most delicious beverage, and they will gulp down perfumery, extracts, and any sort of bitters with as much gusto as such deadly doses of wood alcohol does not frighten them in the least, and they really prefer it to any other intoxicant."—Washington Post.

Rear Guard in the Retreat.

The late General Schofield was once describing in Washington a certain retreat of cavalry.

"I don't call it a retreat," he said, "but I should really call it a rout."

He smiled.

"In this retreat," he went on, "the commanding general, as his charger tore like the wind along, turned to his aide, who galloped beside him, and said: 'The rear guard is retreating!'

"The aide, without ceasing for an instant to belabor his panting steed, replied: 'Those who have the worst horses, sir.'"

West Indian Cotton.

Cotton cultivation is proving a great success in the British West Indies, according to the Commissioner of Agriculture for those colonies. The volume and quality of the product being extremely satisfactory. The bales exported in 1905 were 3,556, against 2,546 in 1904, the sea-land variety bringing 25 cents a pound, and the more ordinary variety 20 cents. The value of the crop was $315,500 though the industry is but four years old. The crop of the present year is still better, and the Barbados shipments have brought 33 cents a pound. Applications for seed are being received from Cuba and the United States, in view of the superior quality of the West Indian cotton. It is said to excel our sea-land variety.

MISSING TUTOR IN NEW ORLEANS.

Uncle of Murdered Woman Receives Letter Supposed to be from Muentzer.

(By Associated Press.)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 8.—A special from Lou Lac, Wis., says:

Lewis F. Haas, an uncle of Leona Muentzer, the woman who died under mysterious circumstances at Cambridge, Mass., is in receipt of a letter which he believes is from Eric Muentzer, the woman's husband, who is wanted on a charge of murder. The letter is unsigned and is dated New Orleans. It sets out with a description of the murder of a woman, the details of which might well have corresponded with the supposed Massachusetts crime.

The last two pages are filled with pleading for the woman's relatives will believe him innocent of the crime of which he has been accused. Then the writer denounces his brothers-in-law for calling him a murderer. Mr. Haas says he is sure that it was written by the missing Harvard professor.

NEW ORLEANS, June 8.—The New Orleans police to-day received information from the chief of police of Cambridge, Mass., that Eric Muentzer was probably in New Orleans at June 2nd. All efforts to discover his whereabouts here thus far have been unsuccessful. Several detectives are looking for him.

THE MONOTYPE IN THE NEWER SAN FRANCISCO.

Important Part Being Played by the Lanston Monotype in Repairing the Damage Done by Earthquake.

Of all the handicrafts confronting the business men of San Francisco in their attempts to bring commercial order out of the general chaos following the earthquake and fire, one of the most serious was the lack of printed matter of all kinds. San Francisco had been swept clean of all catalogues, price lists, circulars, commercial stationery, etc., and furthermore, practically every case of type in the city had been destroyed.

Every monotype in San Francisco was ruined by the fire and falling walls, but before the ruins were extinguished the Lanston Monotype Company had a carload of machines speeding westward from Philadelphia.

Under the circumstances, the Monotype, being as it is, practically a type foundry in itself, proved invaluable. Other machines are being rushed to the Pacific Coast by fire and express. Every Monotype user in San Francisco has expressed the intention to replace the lost machines, and those who used other makes of type setting machinery will, in most cases, replace their antiquated equipment with the up-to-date Monotype. This wonderful machine casts single type from five point to thirty-six point and is a vast improvement over the slug system of typesetting machines. It also casts numerous faces of job type, enabling the printer to replenish his sorts when necessary.

Over one hundred of these machines are now in use by the United States government, as well as the governments of nearly every civilized country.

The Monotype is manufactured by the Lanston Monotype Machine Company, of Philadelphia, Wood and North, No. 1 Madison Avenue, New York, are the selling agents.

LONG ABSENT, NOW MANILA ATTORNEY.

Kansas Man, Given Up as a Suicide Nine Years Ago, Returns to His Old Home.

NEW LOVE ROUTED THE OLD

Leaving States After Quarrel With Sweetheart, He Marries in the Philippines.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 8.—Jesse George, until December, 1897, one of this city's prominent attorneys, who, at that time disappeared from here as effectually as though the earth had swallowed him, and believed by some to have committed suicide and by others to have been murdered, has returned to Leavenworth. He is at present assistant prosecuting attorney of the city of Manila and one of the successful practicing attorneys in the Philippines.

When George disappeared from here some small boys found a box of love letters in a sealed box on the Missouri river bank. It was opened and found to contain those written by George to a young woman in Amboy, Ind., and returned to him.

George began the practice of law here early in the thirties and was quite successful. He was counsel for the veterans of the National Military Home when they preferred various charges against Colonel A. J. Smith, then governor of the home, and his prosecution was so vigorous that he was successful in having that officer relieved from duty here and transferred to the Santa Monica (Cal.) Home.

After his disappearance his friends asserted that he had been murdered by partisans of Governor Smith and his body had been thrown into the river. This led to a search, which proved fruitless, and it was not until the box of love letters was found that the theory of murder was dropped and then his friends concluded he had, in a fit of melancholia, committed suicide.

The attorney, after leaving Leavenworth, made his way to Honolulu and practiced law there. When the Spanish-American war broke out he was enlisted to serve in the army, so returned to San Francisco, where he enlisted in the Third United States Artillery and went to the Philippine Islands.

In the islands George served through the Philippine campaign with the artillery, going through to Malolos in the chase after Aguinaldo. He remained in the service until the Third was ordered home, when he took his discharge and remained in Manila.

The first employment obtained by him was when this government sought school teachers for the Manila city schools. He obtained a place and taught for several years, being promoted from time to time until he was looked upon as one of that city's most prominent educators.

He married an estimable young woman who went to the islands from Iowa, but she died a year ago, and it was for this reason the attorney returned to the United States to bring the body of his wife back to the cemetery in her old home.

George, after trying of his teaching career, took up the practice of law again. He was successful and the authorities in Manila when the office of assistant prosecuting attorney became vacant, chose him for the place and he accepted. He has been very successful in this office.

Railway Inventions.

An invention of considerable importance for railways and tramways has been perfected in Belgium, says the London Globe. The invention is in two parts, being a mechanical coupling device for doing away with the most prolific cause of accidents during shunting. The other part consists in an automatic brake, whereby, if a coupling snaps, the detached vehicles are at once brought to a standstill. The invention was practically tested the other day. Nearly all the upper railway officials and the heads of the Brussels tramways went out into the open country on a train in which the coupling arrangement and the brake for stopping the vehicles after a snap of the couplings were several times tested with complete success.

A Woman's Health

depends so much upon her functions, that the least upset of them affects her whole system. It is the little things that count, in woman's life and health. The little pains, and other symptoms of womanly disorder, soon lead up to big things,—serious pains, serious diseases. It is for just these ordinary, common, womanly troubles, that the use of a gentle, strengthening, female tonic, like has been found so successful, in thousands of cases, in relieving and curing. "I had been troubled with female complaints for 12 months," writes Mrs. Bettie Arp, of Ballplay, Tenn., "and although I was under doctors' care for four months, they did but little good. I took one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one dollar's worth of Thedford's Black-Draught, and now I am better. I believe Cardui saved my life. We are poor people, but I shall always keep it in the house." It relieves woman's worst pains and regulates fitful functions. Try it.

LANAHAN COULD NOT GET ORDERS

Governor Threatened to Remove Entire Purchasing Board in South Carolina.

(By Associated Press.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 8.—W. A. Clark, president of the Carolina National Bank, to-day testified that he had had frequent conversations with S. J. Lanahan, of William Lanahan and Company, of Baltimore, and that Mr. Lanahan had complained that although he had over $200,000 invested in manufacturing enterprises in Columbia, he could not get his due proportion of orders from the state. He put in evidence a letter which he had received from Lanahan and had turned over to Governor Haywood. The latter declared his intention to remove the purchasing board in South Carolina.

New French Government.

Armand Fallieres went through the local schools with his first wife, and was sent up to Paris to study law, writes Vance Thompson, in Everybody's Magazine. A year of jolly idleness in the Latin quarter failed to get him through his examinations and he went back to the South. A few years later he was admitted to the bar Toulouse, but the old father was never able to make much amount to anything. A few local jobs in which he pleaded showed that he had a kind of eloquence, and the politicians took him up. From the fall of the Second Empire he went steadily up in the Republican hierarchy: Mayor of Narbonne, Deputy Minister, Senator, his advance was uninterrupted. Every Monsieur Loubet became President in succession to the presidency of the Senate. His entrance to the Elysee was the logical conclusion of a career which has not been without a kind of plainness. This good-natured, courteous, old man, who loved a good dinner and the wine of Languedoc, with his Gascon stories and loud-roaring laughter, is a type of much that is good in French public life. That kind of a man never runs the risk of getting himself burned as a martyr or hated as a reformer; and he is not persecuted necessarily as an old man, who is a bad local job, and is not able to be of a bad local job.
